

How a contractor boosted cash flow by improving project research

Raider Painting saved 3 hours per project with Levelset's Scout Research.

LEVELSET

Wasted hours researching job details

Raider Painting needs accurate information to send notices and secure payments. However, they often receive incomplete or inaccurate job site data from contractors. For each project, the director of operations spent hours researching to find information about the property and other parties on the job. Public access to construction job information is increasingly limited, making it nearly impossible to find or verify job details.

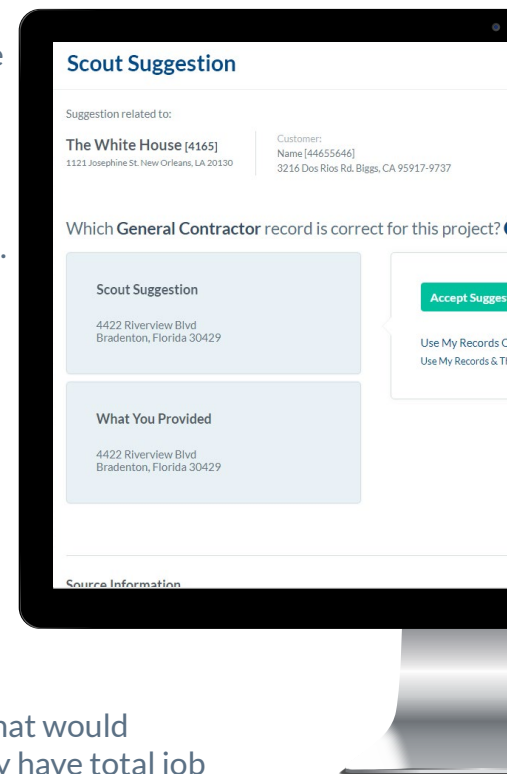

Scout ensured paperwork was fast & accurate

Raider Painting turned to Levelset for help. They fill in the information they know about a job, and Levelset's Scout Research takes care of the rest. Raider Painting's team is notified when inconsistencies and data gaps are fixed, giving them peace of mind that their documents are accurate and their payments protected.

Confidently file paperwork quickly and accurately

Raider Painting no longer worries about document mistakes that would forfeit their lien rights and put them at financial risk. Now, they have total job transparency, accuracy, and efficiency on all their projects in a few clicks. Each month, they save valuable time and money now that Levelset enables them to track deadlines, send notices with ease, and keep track of complex variables.

"Levelset's Scout tool has direct access to property ownership info that is invaluable! They do the research on the property owner and other entities that you may not easily be able to locate otherwise."
